THE LICK LENS.

Wonderful Effect Upon It of the Heat From a Man's Hand.

Some years ago the writer paid a visit to Alvan Clark at Cambridgeport to witness the testing of the huge lens for the famous Lick telescope. At the end of the long, dark room the largest flint glass then in the world was set up on edge. From a distance of about fifty feet a pencil of light was flashed into the heart of the disk and reflected back into the observer's eye. The slightest imperfections, if any, in the glass would then be revealed by the curves of light and the lines of polarization.

"Now," said Mr. Clark, "I will show you the wonderful sensitiveness of the lens to outside influences. Every human body is a source of heat and when brought near the lens the sensitive substance is affected to a greater or less extent. Now watch."

He walked down to the lens and held his hand under it about two feet away. Instantaneously a marvelous spectacle burst into view. It seemed as if the great glass disk had become a living volcano, spouting forth jets of flame. The display was dazzling. Waving, leaping, dancing, the countless tongues of light gleamed and vibrated; then, fitfully, reluctantly, they died away, leaving the lens reflecting only a pure, untroubled light.

"What is it? How do you account for the wonder?" were the eager questions.

"It is only the radiation of heat alternately expanding and contracting the glass. If I had put my hand upon the lens itself, the phenomenon would have been even more violent."

To a person ignorant of lenses the almost supernatural sensitiveness of a mass of glass weighing several hundred pounds was astonishing, but to the scientist it is an everyday matter, for he has instruments that will register with unfailing nicety the approach of a person fifty or a hundred feet away.—Youth's Companion.

CONQUERED HER RIVAL.

A Pretty and Pathetic Story of Jenny Lind and Grist.

We have recently read a beautiful incident. Jenny Lind and Grist were both rivals for popular favor in London. Both were invited to sing the same night at a court concern before the queen. Jenny Lind, being the younger, sang first and was so disturbed by the fierce, scornful look of Grist that she was at the point of failure when suddenly an inspiration came to her.

The accompanist was striking the final chords. She asked him to rise and took the vacant seat. Her fingers wandered over the keys in a loving prelude, and then she sang a little prayer which she had loved as a child. She hadn't sung it for years. As she sang she was no longer in the presence of royalty, but singing to loving friends in her fatherland.

Softly at first the plaintive notes floated on the air, swelling louder and richer every moment. The singer seemed to throw her whole soul into that weird, thrilling, plaintive "prayer." Gradually the song died away and ended in a sob. There was a silence—the silence of admiring wonder.

The audience sat spellbound. Jenny Lind lifted her sweet eyes to look into the scornful face that had so disconcerted her. There was no fierce expression now; instead a teardrop glistened on the long, black lashes, and after a moment, with the impulsiveness of a child of the tropics, Grist crossed to Jenny Lind's side, placed her arm about her and kissed her, utterly regardless of the audience.—Our Dumb Animals.

An Outrage.

An old gentleman was present at the reading of the will of a distant relative. He had hardly expected to find himself remembered in it, but pretty soon a clause was read in which a certain field was bequeathed to him. That was good, but the document went on to bequeath the old gray mare in the said field to some one else—a man with whom the old gentleman was not on friendly terms. That was too much for his equanimity, and he interrupted the solemn proceedings and brought a smile to the faces of the company by exclaiming:

"Then she's eating my grass!"—Pearson's.

The Highest Court.

The Denver Times says that when Tom Bagnell was justice of the peace at Altman, the highest incorporated town in the country, standing 12,000 feet above the sea level, he had occasion to fine a disorderly character $10 and costs. The victim of the operation of justice objected to the finding of the court and announced that he would take an appeal.

"What? Appeal, would you?" asked the astonished court. "You can't come any of that, now. This is the highest court in the United States, and you can't appeal."

She Was an Observer.

"Did George write to you every day while he was traveling around?"

"Yes, every day."

"What regularly?"

"Yes, but I discovered that every one of the letters was written here in his office before he started, and all he had to do was to drop one in the postoffice wherever he chanced to be."

"And how did you find that out?"

"The 'e' in his office typewriter is broken."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Its Good Point.

Gentleman (to house agent)—The great disadvantage is that the house is so damp.

House Agent—Disadvantage, sir? Advantage, I call it. In case of fire it wouldn't be so likely to burn.

THE WIDOW TAX.

In Mindanao a Wife's Death Costs the Widower One Hundred Plates.

Becoming a widow or a widower is a much more serious business than getting married among some of the tribes in the Philippines. In Mindanao "marrying in haste" often leads to a prolonged "repenting at leisure," for they have an institution there known as the "widow tax"—"chabaloon" the natives call it. Upon the death of the wife the widower must pay a certain sum of money or its equivalent in goods to his father-in-law before he can go a-courting again. As money is a scarce article among these natives, the tax generally is paid in plates of common "stone china," which are much used by the natives as a medium of exchange. It is considered the proper thing for the bereaved one to pay 100 of these plates to his father-in-law for permission to look about him for a successor to the deceased helpmate.

If the husband dies, the widow at once becomes the property of her parents-in-law and so remains for life unless some relative comes forward and produces the necessary number of dinner plates. The natural result of this is that married people are all extremely solicitous for the health of each other. In sickness the invalid is sedulously attended by the partner of his or her joys and sorrows, the well person perhaps being moved more by the thought of those hundred plates than by real affection.

Divorce is unknown among these people, but a man may have as many wives as he pleases. It will be seen that in case of an epidemic which would sweep away his wives a married man would be in dire extremity. In the case of a death of a much married man his parents come into a small fortune, for they either have enough slaves to render future work on their part unnecessary or they receive enough plates from the families of the widows to set up a crockery store.

DWARFING AN OAK TREE.

The Japanese Trick by Which It Is Accomplished.

The Chabo Hiba, a dwarf Japanese pine tree, was recently sold for $1,200. It is six feet high and alleged to be 850 years old. It has long been supposed that the process by which Japanese gardeners succeeded in dwarfing forest trees was a long and costly one. It is now said that it is a simple process and that any one can do the trick. The following directions are given for producing a miniature oak tree:

Take an orange and scoop out the pulp. Fill the interior with a rich mold, and plant an acorn in the center of it, leaving the hole in the rind for it to sprout through. Put it in a sunny place and water it frequently. Soon after the first shoots have appeared the roots begin to break through the orange skin. Take a sharp knife and shave these off carefully and keep them shaved. The tree will grow about five or six inches high and then stop. In a year it will be a perfect miniature oak. When the roots cease to grow, the orange skin should be varnished over and imbedded in a flowerpot.

The Japanese dwarf all kinds of trees and make them live to a great age. Some of these dwarfs, like the Chabo Hiba, are well known, and their owners have documentary evidence attesting their great age. The older they are the more valuable, of course, they are. In Japan certain families follow the calling, trade, art, or what you will, of growing dwarf trees from generation to generation, and you can buy a miniature oak 500 years old from a descendant of the man who first planted the acorn. Not only forest trees, but fruit trees and flowering shrubs, are dwarfed by these clever gardeners.

Swimming.

"In swimming a man should time his stroke with his breathing. He should take but one stroke to each breath. In this way the muscles of the body work in conjunction with the lungs, and no energy is wasted. In salt water, which, of course, is more buoyant than fresh water, a man who has trained himself in this way should have no difficulty in keeping afloat, say he were shipwrecked, until sheer weakness from hunger and thirst would force him to succumb."—Philadelphia Record.

Daly's Impenetrable Employee.

The late Augustin Daly had in his employment a man who always addressed him a note periodically asking for an advance of money. This note was invariably answered by a most abusive letter, in almost insulting terms

SECOND DAY AT THE FAIR.

Farmers' and Confederates Day a Great Success—Address by Col. Lanham.

Farmers and Confederate Day at the Central Texas Fair was a close second in popular favor to the opening day. The farmers from Brazos and surrounding counties were here in large numbers, many of them being old soldiers who swelled the ranks of those present who followed the fortunes of the Lost Cause. The veterans of ex-confederate camps were especially invited to be present as guests of Camp J. B. Robertson, U. C. V., of Bryan, and hear an address from their old comrade in arms, Hon. S. W. T. Lanham, of Weatherford, now a candidate for governor.

The address of Col. Lanham was the feature of the morning. At the appointed hour the speaker was introduced in a few appropriate words by Col. N. H. Tracy, of Rockdale, himself an ex-confederate. Col. Lanham expressed the highest appreciation of the honor of being invited to address his old comrades, and referred pleasantly to the fact that he gratefully remembered that Brazos county instructed for him in his former race for governor. He spoke in complimentary terms of the fair and expressed the hope that it might grow in importance and benefit. Col. Lanham then took up the subject of his discourse, which was an eloquent and glowing tribute to the men who wore the gray. He reviewed the history of the great civil war, and eulogized Jefferson Davis, Lee, Jackson and other immortals of the south, as well as the heroes who bore the brunt of the battle on the fighting line and endured the hardships of the private soldier who went forth give his life if need be for the cause of truth and liberty. He said the men of the south who fought for their country's honor were the best people the world ever saw, and that history will yet accord to their memory the honor their bravery and patriotism so richly deserve. He vividly described the scenes of marshalling to arms before the struggle, the farewell to home and loved ones, the frightful scenes of internecine strife, the wounded and dying.

The speaker compared the numerical strength of the armies of the north and south and showed what an unparalleled record for fighting and endurance was made by the latter in the four years' struggle. He then related how the former returned to their homes to be crowned with the laurels of victory and to be elevated to high positions and emoluments, while the confederate soldier returned to a dismantled and broken home and a devastated land. Yet since that time he has risen to the highest positions in public and private life and has bent his energies to building up waste places. One by one our numbers are diminishing and those who survive should perpetuate this glorious memory because it is our history, and we have these special fair days and reunions to tell the story of those who died for the cause they loved.

The hope of the south depends largely upon the ex-confederates and their posterity, and he or she is a recreant son or daughter who does not treasure up this hallowed memory and honor these old heroes. Col. Lanham spoke in terms of praise of the old time southern negro, who worked for and protected the wives and families of the absent soldiers, and said he delighted to honor such a colored man, although some of the modern negroes are not worth killing; but he said in the south the judgment and conservatism of the white man must always lead and direct affairs, and now, henceforth and forever we draw the line against social equality.

A beautiful tribute was paid to the women of the South, who though they could not be with the soldiers in person, were ever present with them in love and sympathy, and upheld them in their prayers, toiled, sacrificed and suffered for them and ministered like angels beside the wounded and dying. God Almighty bless forever the women of the confederacy!

Col. Lanham said he appreciates more than his eight commissions to congress and any of the unsignia or other honors which have come to him his parole as Sergeant Lanham, and added that when he died he wished to be wrapped in a confederate flag and borne to his last resting place by his old comrades. Here the speaker referred to the death of President McKinley as the brightest and sweetest example of Christian resignation in history, and said he wished that each confederate soldier might die like that.

The speech was full of beauty and pathos and held the audience in perfect silence, tears glistening upon the cheeks of hundreds. At the close the old soldiers pressed forward and bore Col. Lanham from the grand stand in triumph amidst deafening applause.

WOMEN AND JEWELS.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get all Dr. G. Green's reliable remedies at the Wilson-Jenkins Drug Co.'s store, Bryan. NATURE'S MISTAKES.

SOME THAT MEN CONSIDER TO BE OF
REMARKABLE VALUE.

Paradoxical as it may appear, the perfection of a gem is largely due to some imperfection in its making by nature.

Paradoxical as it may appear, the perfection of a gem is largely due to some imperfection in its make. Some little mistake made in the laboratory of nature produces a defective stone which is perfect itself from the lapidary's point of view. Ninety-nine out of every hundred emeralds dug from the mine are almost white and of little value, but the hundredth one is of a rich velvety green and, if without other flaws than its color, sells for $300 a carat or 240 times as much as its colorless brother. The reason of the rich color which gives the emerald its value is that nature, in making the stone, put in too much oxide of chromium, just as the cook sometimes gets too much saleratus in the biscuits. The standard of perfection in the laboratory of nature is the colorless emerald, and her deep green ones are some of her failures; failures which, nevertheless, delight mankind, however much they may disgust nature. You could buy a ton of oxide of chromium for the price which half a grain of it gives to a cheap and common crystal.

When nature makes mistakes in manufacturing diamonds, the results are equally remarkable. Her standard for a diamond is a pure white stone, but sometimes a foreign substance gets into the crucible, and the result is a red or blue diamond. A fine white brilliant of one carat can be bought for $125, but a blue stone of that size would be cheap at $3,500. A red diamond is of even greater value, a red stone of fifteen grains having been sold for $5,000. Yet the little particle of foreign material which nature carelessly let fall into the mixture when she was making that stone down in the heart of some primeval volcano is of less value than a grain of common salt and only got there by mistake.

Nature manufactures in her laboratory a material called spinel. You can buy a block of spinel as large as you can carry for a few dollars. Sometimes in making spinel small quantities of chromic acid get into the material and color it a deep red. The pieces so colored nature rejects as spoiled in the making and throws them in the dust bin, from which men dig them out and call them rubies. A ruby of thirty-two carats recently sold for $52,000. Yet the material of the cheap spinel and the valuable ruby are practically the same, save for that small fraction of chromic acid which got into the ruby by mistake.

When nature starts out to manufacture opals, she endeavors to make them without any cracks in them. In this she seldom succeeds, coming nearest to perfection in the Mexican opals, which have few cracks in them and therefore little luster. The fiery glow of the oriental opal and the play of light in the depths of that exquisite stone are due entirely to the numberless cracks which seam the surface of the gem. It must give nature a poor opinion of mankind when she sees him selling the Mexican opals, which are nearly perfect, for 12 cents a carat and paying $25 a carat for her failures, the cracked fire opal of the east.

Not only in gems, but in many other things, does nature make mistakes and failures, the results of which are highly valued by man. The chank shell, a shell much like the conch shell of these shores, is one of the commonest shells on the beaches of India, and millions of them are gathered and burned for the lime that is in them. Yet in a temple near Kandy, Ceylon, are two chank shells which hold the place of honor in a shrine covered with gold, and no amount of money could buy them from their guardian priests. Their value consists in the fact that nature was not quite herself the morning she fabricated these shells and gave a right handed twist to them instead of a left handed one, such as has been given to all other chank shells, so far as man knows, since the beginning.

Baron Rothschild once paid $300 a dozen for some Schloss Johannisberg wine, and it is admitted that, taking everything into consideration, it was not an exorbitant price. Yet the wine of the same year from the vineyard directly adjoining the Schlossberg vineyard, on the same bank of the Rhine, a vineyard whose soil is, to all appearances, the same, only brought $5 a dozen. And there is no special secret about the manufacture of Schlossberg wine or about the variety of grape used. Its great value comes from a little joke of nature. In the soil of the Schlossberg vineyard there is an infinitesimal amount of a certain salt which is found in the soil of no other vineyard. The admixture is so slight that no chemist has ever been able to imitate it, yet it is worth many thousands a year to the owner of the vineyard.

When Gold Looks Green.

Gold can be beaten out so thin that it allows light to pass through it, in which case, though it still appears brilliant yellow by reflected light, it is green as viewed by transmission—that is, by the light that passes through it. This curious effect can easily be observed by laying a piece of gold leaf upon a plate of glass and holding it between the eye and the light, when the gold will appear semitransparent and of a leek green color.

And There Are Others.

Waggs—Old man Blowitz has a remarkable memory, hasn't he?

Naggs—Wonderful. Why, he actually remembers a lot of things that never happened.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Twice an Irish Bull.

Before the days of proper safeguards a good many cattle got in the paths of Michigan railroads and were killed outright or so badly injured as to necessitate putting them out of misery. These happenings frequently afforded the owners of the cattle an opportunity to bring suit against the railroad companies, so that the employees were required to be very careful as to details and to keep a strict record of the manner of a cow's death, etc. Regular printed reports of such cases had to be turned in by the section master, who was required to fill out blanks stating the probable age of the deceased animal, weight, color, distinguishing marks and disposition of carcass, the animal being sometimes cut up and sold for beef.

Naturally it was an Irish section "schuperintindher" who, like Finnigan in his terse report of a wreck, simply stated, "Off ag'in, on ag'in—Finnegan," made out the record of a certain bovine tragedy in a characteristic way. Mike guessed pretty well at the age and weight and color of the dead cow, but when he came to the line "disposition of carcass" he scratched his head reflectively.

"Sure," he muttered, "she doiled aisy, annyway." Then opposite the line he scrawled, "Kind a gentle."—Detroit Free Press.

What a Daub of Ink Did.

A certain newspaper proprietor had a way of appearing in the composing and press rooms at the most unexpected times, and as his visits often resulted in a general "shakeup" of the working forces of the paper they were awaited with fear and trembling by the employees.

One time one of the pressmen, an excellent workman, who had been there many years, but was sometimes guilty of a lapse of sobriety, had a black eye and was in a quandary as to what excuse he should offer if the proprietor noticed it. By a sudden inspiration he seized an ink roller and daubed some ink on his face, quite covering the discoloration. Presently the governor came in and, with the foreman, went through the room, commenting on every detail and looking very sharply at every workman. When about to leave, he suddenly pointed to the inky pressman and said, "What is that man's name?"

The man quaked in his shoes until he continued slowly: "I want you to give that man 5 shillings a week more wages. He is the only man in the room who looks as if he had been working."

Something to Brace Up On.

It was along about noon when a well dressed man lined up against the bar. He had the air and looked the part of a high liver, but there was every sign of a bad night. He stretched himself, rubbed his head and said to the bartender:

"I want something to brace up on."

"All right, sir. 'What'll it be?"

"Get the large lemonade glass and break five eggs in it."

Chapman, the bartender, looked at him suspiciously and hesitated.

"That's what I want," he ordered.

Chapman broke five raw eggs in the glass and waited for further orders.

"Now a pint of champagne."

Chapman opened the bottle, and the customer poured it on top of the eggs and, taking a spoon, stirred the mixture thoroughly and then drank it. Then he paid his bill and walked out.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Prunes as Medicine.

That the fruit possesses very considerable virtue in this respect is conceded by most eminent authorities, and for this reason as well as on account of their food value they are included among the foods suitable for invalids, children and those whose digestive powers are rather inactive. Their influence is mild, which fact makes them desirable for the not over robust.

A dish of well cooked rice and prunes, made dainty and attractive for serving, is a dish to serve for either a breakfast, luncheon or a dessert, especially for the child or invalid, and should be added especially to our list of hot weather dishes, frequently replacing meat and potatoes and heavy, unseasonable desserts.

A Man of Experience.

"You are quite sure, Uncle Bushrod," she queried, "that Judy has no idea there are only books in those two boxes you took this morning over to the courthouse in the cart?"

"Miss Ma'y," answered the old chap, with dignity, "I done had three wives, an' Judy's de las, I reckon. An' I jes' tell you dis, honey, I don' trust no colored 'ooman's tongue."—Mrs. Burton Harrison in Lippincott's.

Bodily Proportions.

The proportions of the human figure, says an anatomist, are six times the length of the right foot. The face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the end of the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature. The hand, from the wrist to the end of the middle finger, is also one-tenth of the total height. From the crown to the nape of the neck is one-twelfth of the stature.

The Original Pair.

Upon one point the disputants are agreed: Man descended from a pair of ancestors. Who they were is not so apparent.—Chicago Tribune.

Happiness is sometimes like a pair of spectacles. While one looks for it it sits astride one's very nose.—New York Times.

If a man saved the ash of all the cigars he smoked, he would have consumed 1,000 before he had a pound of ash.

THE LICK LENS.

Wonderful Effect Upon It of the Heat From a Man's Hand.

Some years ago the writer paid a visit to Alvan Clark at Cambridgeport to witness the testing of the huge lens for the famous Lick telescope. At the end of the long, dark room the largest flint glass then in the world was set up on edge. From a distance of about fifty feet a pencil of light was flashed into the heart of the disk and reflected back into the observer's eye. The slightest imperfections, if any, in the glass would then be revealed by the curves of light and the lines of polarization.

"Now," said Mr. Clark, "I will show you the wonderful sensitiveness of the lens to outside influences. Every human body is a source of heat and when brought near the lens the sensitive substances are affected to a greater or less extent. Now watch."

He walked down to the lens and held his hand under it about two feet away. Instantaneously a marvelous spectacle burst into view. It seemed as if the great glass disk had become a living volcano, spouting forth jets of flame. The display was dazzling. Waving, leaping, dancing, the countless tongues of light gleamed and vibrated; then, fitfully, reluctantly, they died away, leaving the lens reflecting only a pure, untroubled light.

"What is it? How do you account for the wonder?" were the eager questions.

"It is only the radiation of heat alternately expanding and contracting the glass. If I had put my hand upon the lens itself, the phenomenon would have been even more violent."

To a person ignorant of lenses the almost supernatural sensitiveness of a mass of glass weighing several hundred pounds was astonishing, but to the scientist it is an everyday matter, for he has instruments that will register with unfailing nicety the approach of a person fifty or a hundred feet away.—Youth's Companion.

CONQUERED HER RIVAL.

A Pretty and Pathetic Story of Jenny Lind and Grisi.

We have recently read a beautiful incident. Jenny Lind and Grisi were both rivals for popular favor in London. Both were invited to sing the same night at a court concert before the queen. Jenny Lind, being the younger, sang first and was so disturbed by the fierce, scornful look of Grisi that she was at the point of failure when suddenly an inspiration came to her.

The accompanist was striking the final chords. She asked him to rise and took the vacant seat. Her fingers wandered over the keys in a loving prelude, and then she sang a little prayer which she had loved as a child. She hadn't sung it for years. As she sang she was no longer in the presence of royalty, but singing to loving friends in her fatherland.

Softly at first the plaintive notes floated on the air, swelling louder and richer every moment. The singer seemed to throw her whole soul into that weird, thrilling, plaintive "prayer." Gradually the song died away and ended in a sob. There was a silence—the silence of admiring wonder.

The audience sat spellbound. Jenny Lind lifted her sweet eyes to look into the scornful face that had so disconcerted her. There was no fierce expression now; instead a teardrop glistened on the long, black lashes, and after a moment, with the impulsiveness of a child of the tropics, Grisi crossed to Jenny Lind's side, placed her arm about her and kissed her, utterly regardless of the audience.—Our Dumb Animals.

An Outrage.

An old gentleman was present at the reading of the will of a distant relative. He had hardly expected to find himself remembered in it, but pretty soon a clause was read in which a certain field was bequeathed to him. That was good, but the document went on to bequeath the old gray mare in the said field to some one else—a man with whom the old gentleman was not on friendly terms. That was too much for his equality, and he interrupted the solemn proceedings and brought a smile to the faces of the company by exclaiming:

"Then she's eating my grass!"—Pearson's.

The Highest Court.

The Denver Times says that when Tom Bagnell was justice of the peace at Altman, the highest incorporated town in the country, standing 12,000 feet above the sea level, he had occasion to fine a disorderly character $10 and costs. The victim of the operation of justice objected to the finding of the court and announced that he would take an appeal.

"What? Appeal, would you?" asked the astonished court. "You can't come any of that, now. This is the highest court in the United States, and you can't appeal."

She Was an Observer.

"Did George write to you every day while he was traveling around?"

"Yes, every day."

"What regularly?"

"Yes, but I discovered that every one of the letters was written here in his office before he started, and all he had to do was to drop one in the postoffice wherever he chanced to be."

"And how did you find that out?"

"The 'e' in his office typewriter is broken."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE WIDOW TAX.

In Mindanao a Wife's Death Costs the Widower One Hundred Plates.

Becoming a widow or a widower is a much more serious business than getting married among some of the tribes in the Philippines. In Mindanao "marrying in haste" often leads to a prolonged "repenting at leisure," for they have an institution there known as the "widow tax"—"chabaloon" the natives call it. Upon the death of the wife the widower must pay a certain sum of money or its equivalent in goods to his father-in-law before he can go a-courting again. As money is a scarce article among these natives, the tax generally is paid in plates of common "stone china," which are much used by the natives as a medium of exchange. It is considered the proper thing for the bereaved one to pay 100 of these plates to his father-in-law for permission to look about him for a successor to the deceased helpmate.

If the husband dies, the widow at once becomes the property of her parents-in-law and so remains for life unless some relative comes forward and produces the necessary number of dinner plates. The natural result of this is that married people are all extremely solicitous for the health of each other. In sickness the invalid is sedulously attended by the partner of his or her joys and sorrows, the well person perhaps being moved more by the thought of those hundred plates than by real affection.

Divorce is unknown among these people, but a man may have as many wives as he pleases. It will be seen that in case of an epidemic which would sweep away his wives a married man would be in dire extremity. In the case of a death of a much married man his parents come into a small fortune, for they either have enough slaves to render future work on their part unnecessary or they receive enough plates from the families of the widows to set up a crockery store.

DWARFING AN OAK TREE.

The Japanese Trick by Which It Is Accomplished.

The Chabo Hiba, a dwarf Japanese pine tree, was recently sold for $1,200. It is six feet high and alleged to be 850 years old. It has long been supposed that the process by which Japanese gardeners succeeded in dwarfing forest trees was a long and costly one. It is now said that it is a simple process and that any one can do the trick. The following directions are given for producing a miniature oak tree:

Take an orange and scoop out the pulp. Fill the interior with a rich mold, and plant an acorn in the center of it, leaving the hole in the rind for it to sprout through. Put it in a sunny place and water it frequently. Soon after the first shoots have appeared the roots begin to break through the orange skin. Take a sharp knife and shave these off carefully and keep them shaved. The tree will grow about five or six inches high and then stop. In a year it will be a perfect miniature oak. When the roots cease to grow, the orange skin should be varnished over and imbedded in a flowerpot.

The Japanese dwarf all kinds of trees and make them live to a great age. Some of these dwarfs, like the Chabo Hiba, are well known, and their owners have documentary evidence attesting their great age. The older they are the more valuable, of course, they are. In Japan certain families follow the calling, trade, art, or what you will, of growing dwarf trees from generation to generation, and you can buy a miniature oak 500 years old from a descendant of the man who first planted the acorn. Not only forest trees, but fruit trees and flowering shrubs, are dwarfed by these clever gardeners.

Swimming.

"In swimming a man should time his stroke with his breathing. He should take but one stroke to each breath. In this way the muscles of the body work in conjunction with the lungs, and no energy is wasted. In salt water, which, of course, is more buoyant than fresh water, a man who has trained himself in this way should have no difficulty in keeping afloat, say he were shipwrecked, until sheer weakness from hunger and thirst would force him to succumb."—Philadelphia Record.

Daly's Impeccable Employee.

The late Augustin Daly had in his employment a man who always addressed him a note periodically asking for an advance of money. This note was invariably answered by a most abusive letter, in almost insulting terms

SECOND DAY AT THE FAIR.

Farmers' and Confederates Day a Great Success—Address by Col. Lanham.

Farmers and Confederate Day at the Central Texas Fair was a close second in popular favor to the opening day. The farmers from Brazos and surrounding counties were here in large numbers, many of them being old soldiers who swelled the ranks of those present who followed the fortunes of the Lost Cause. The veterans of ex-confederate camps were especially invited to be present as guests of Camp J. B. Robertson, U. C. V., of Bryan, and hear an address from their old comrade in arms, Hon. S. W. T. Lanham, of Weatherford, now a candidate for governor.

The address of Col. Lanham was the feature of the morning. At the appointed hour the speaker was introduced in a few appropriate words by Col. N. H. Tracy, of Rockdale, himself an ex-confederate. Col. Lanham expressed the highest appreciation of the honor of being invited to address his old comrades, and referred pleasantly to the fact that he gratefully remembered that Brazos county instructed for him in his former race for governor. He spoke in complimentary terms of the fair and expressed the hope that it might grow in importance and benefit. Col. Lanham then took up the subject of his discourse, which was an eloquent and glowing tribute to the men who wore the gray. He reviewed the history of the great civil war, and eulogized Jefferson Davis, Lee, Jackson and other immortals of the south, as well as the heroes who bore the brunt of the battle on the fighting line and endured the hardships of the private soldier who went forth give his life if need be for the cause of truth and liberty. He said the men of the south who fought for their country's honor were the best people the world ever saw, and that history will yet accord to their memory the honor their bravery and patriotism so richly deserve. He vividly described the scenes of marshalling to arms before the struggle, the farewell to home and loved ones, the frightful scenes of internecine strife, the wounded and dying.

The speaker compared the numerical strength of the armies of the north and south and showed what an unparalleled record for fighting and endurance was made by the latter in the four years' struggle. He then related how the former returned to their homes to be crowned with the laurels of victory and to be elevated to high positions and emoluments, while the confederate soldier returned to a dismantled and broken home and a devastated land. Yet since that time he has risen to the highest positions in public and private life and has bent his energies to building up waste places. One by one our numbers are diminishing and those who survive should perpetuate this glorious memory because it is our history, and we have these special fair days and reunions to tell the story of those who died for the cause they loved. The hope of the south depends largely upon the ex-confederates and their posterity, and he or she is a recreant son or daughter who does not treasure up this hallowed memory and honor these old heroes. Col. Lanham spoke in terms of praise of the old time southern negro, who worked for and protected the wives and families of the absent soldiers, and said he delighted to honor such a colored man, although some of the modern negroes are not worth killing; but he said in the south the judgment and conservatism of the white man must always lead and direct affairs, and now, henceforth and forever we draw the line against social equality.

A beautiful tribute was paid to the women of the South, who though they could not be with the soldiers in person, were ever present with them in love and sympathy, and upheld them in their prayers, toiled, sacrificed and suffered for them and ministered like angels beside the wounded and dying. God Almighty bless forever the women of the confederacy!

Col. Lanham said he appreciates more than his eight commissions to congress and any of the unsignia or other honors which have come to him his parole as Sergeant Lanham, and added that when he died he wished to be wrapped in a confederate flag and borne to his last resting place by his old comrades. Here the speaker referred to the death of President McKinley as the brightest and sweetest example of Christian resignation in history, and said he wished that each confederate soldier might die like that.

The speech was full of beauty and pathos and held the audience in perfect silence, tears glistening upon the cheeks of hundreds. At the close the old soldiers pressed forward and bore Col. Lanham from the grand stand in triumph amidst deafening applause.

WOMEN AND JEWELS.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure-all, but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get all Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at the Wilson-Jenkins Drug Co.'s store, Bryan. NATURE'S MISTAKES.

SOME THAT MEN CONSIDER TO BE OF
REMARKABLE VALUE.

Paradoxical as It May Appear, the Perfection of a Precious Stone is Largely Due to Some Imperfection
in Its Making by Nature.

Paradoxical as it may appear, the perfection of a gem is largely due to some imperfection in its make. Some little mistake made in the laboratory of nature produces a defective stone which is perfection itself from the lapidary's point of view. Ninety-nine out of every hundred emeralds dug from the mine are almost white and of little value, but the hundredth one is of a rich velvety green and, if without other flaws than its color, sells for $300 a carat or 240 times as much as its colorless brother. The reason of the rich color which gives the emerald its value is that nature, in making the stone, put in too much oxide of chromium, just as the cook sometimes gets too much saleratus in the biscuits. The standard of perfection in the laboratory of nature is the colorless emerald, and her deep green ones are some of her failures; failures which, nevertheless, delight mankind, however much they may disgust nature. You could buy a ton of oxide of chromium for the price which half a grain of it gives to a cheap and common crystal.

When nature makes mistakes in manufacturing diamonds, the results are equally remarkable. Her standard for a diamond is a pure white stone, but sometimes a foreign substance gets into the crucible, and the result is a red or blue diamond. A fine white brilliant of one carat can be bought for $125, but a blue stone of that size would be cheap at $3,500. A red diamond is of even greater value, a red stone of fifteen grains having been sold for $5,000. Yet the little particle of foreign material which nature carelessly let fall into the mixture when she was making that stone down in the heart of some primeval volcano is of less value than a grain of common salt and only got there by mistake.

Nature manufactures in her laboratory a material called spinel. You can buy a block of spinel as large as you can carry for a few dollars. Sometimes in making spinel small quantities of chromic acid get into the material and color it a deep red. The pieces so colored nature rejects as spoiled in the making and throws them in the dust bin, from which men dig them out and call them rubies. A ruby of thirty-two carats recently sold for $52,000. Yet the material of the cheap spinel and the valuable ruby are practically the same, save for that small fraction of chromic acid which got into the ruby by mistake.

When nature starts out to manufacture opals, she endeavors to make them without any cracks in them. In this she seldom succeeds, coming nearest to perfection in the Mexican opals, which have few cracks in them and therefore little luster. The fiery glow of the oriental opal and the play of light in the depths of that exquisite stone are due entirely to the numberless cracks which seam the surface of the gem. It must give nature a poor opinion of mankind when she sees him selling the Mexican opals, which are nearly perfect, for 12 cents a carat and paying $25 a carat for her failures, the cracked fire opal of the east.

Not only in gems, but in many other things, does nature make mistakes and failures, the results of which are highly valued by man. The chank shell, a shell much like the conch shell of these shores, is one of the commonest shells on the beaches of India, and millions of them are gathered and burned for the lime that is in them. Yet in a temple near Kandy, Ceylon, are two chank shells which hold the place of honor in a shrine covered with gold, and no amount of money could buy them from their guardian priests. Their value consists in the fact that nature was not quite herself the morning she fabricated these shells and gave a right handed twist to them instead of a left handed one, such as has been given to all other chank shells, so far as man knows, since the beginning.

Baron Rothschild once paid $300 a dozen for some Schloss Johannisberg wine, and it is admitted that, taking everything into consideration, it was not an exorbitant price. Yet the wine of the same year from the vineyard directly adjoining the Schlossberg vineyard, on the same bank of the Rhine, a vineyard whose soil is, to all appearances, the same, only brought $5 a dozen. And there is no special secret about the manufacture of Schlossberg wine or about the variety of grape used. Its great value comes from a little joke of nature. In the soil of the Schlossberg vineyard there is an infinitesimal amount of a certain salt which is found in the soil of no other vineyard. The admixture is so slight that no chemist has ever been able to imitate it, yet it is worth many thousands a year to the owner of the vineyard.

When Gold Looks Green.
Gold can be beaten out so thin that it allows light to pass through it, in which case, though it still appears brilliant yellow by reflected light, it is green as viewed by transmission—that is, by the light that passes through it.
This curious effect can easily be observed by laying a piece of gold leaf upon a plate of glass and holding it between the eye and the light, when the gold will appear semitransparent and of a leek green color.

And There Are Others.
Wags—Old man Blowitt has a remarkable memory, hasn't he?
Nags—Wonderful. Why, he actually remembers a lot of things that never happened.—Chicago Record-Herald.

'Twas an Irish Bull.
Before the days of proper safeguards a good many cattle got in the paths of Michigan railroads and were killed outright or so badly injured as to necessitate putting them out of misery.
These happenings frequently afforded the owners of the cattle an opportunity to bring suit against the railroad companies, so that the employees were required to be very careful as to details and to keep a strict record of the manner of a cow's death, etc. Regular printed reports of such cases had to be turned in by the section master, who was required to fill out blanks stating the probable age of the deceased animal, weight, color, distinguishing marks and disposition of carcass, the animal being sometimes cut up and sold for beef.
Naturally it was an Irish section
"schuperintindher" who, like Finn-gan in his terse report of a wreck, simply stated, "Off ag'in, on ag'in—Pin-negan," made out the record of a certain bovine tragedy in a characteristic way. Mike guessed pretty well at the age and weight and color of the dead cow, but when he came to the line "disposition of carcass" he scratched his head reflectively.
"Sure," he muttered, "she doled aisy, anyway." Then opposite the line he scrawled, "Kind as gentle."—Detroit Free Press.

What a Dumb of Ink Did.
A certain newspaper proprietor had a way of appearing in the composing and press rooms at the most unexpected times, and as his visits often resulted in a general "shakeup" of the working forces of the paper they were awaited with fear and trembling by the employees.

One time one of the pressmen, an excellent workman, who had been there many years, but was sometimes guilty of a lapse of sobriety, had a black eye and was in a quandary as to what excuse he should offer if the proprietor noticed it. By a sudden inspiration he seized an ink roller and daubed some ink on his face, quite covering the discoloration. Presently the governor came in and, with the foreman, went through the room, commenting on every detail and looking very sharply at every workman. When about to leave, he suddenly pointed to the inky press-man and said, "What is that man's name?"

The man quaked in his shoes until he continued slowly: "I want you to give that man 5 shillings a week more wages. He is the only man in the room who looks as if he had been working."

Something to Brace Up On.
It was along about noon when a well dressed man lined up against the bar. He had the air and looked the part of a high liver, but there was every sign of a bad night. He stretched himself, rubbed his head and said to the bartender:

"I want something to brace up on."
"All right, sir. 'What'll it be?"
"Get the large lemonade glass and break five eggs in it." Chapman, the bartender, looked at him suspiciously and hesitated.
"That's what I want," he ordered.
Chapman broke five raw eggs in the glass and waited for further orders.
"Now a pint of champagne."
Chapman opened the bottle, and the customer poured it on top of the eggs and, taking a spoon, stirred the mixture thoroughly and then drank it.
Then he paid his bill and walked out.—
Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Prunes as Medicine.
That the fruit possesses very considerable virtue in this respect is conceded by most eminent authorities, and for this reason as well as on account of their food value they are included among the foods suitable for invalids, children and those whose digestive powers are rather inactive.
Their influence is mild, which fact makes them desirable for the not over robust.

A dish of well cooked rice and prunes, made dainty and attractive for serving, is a dish to serve for either a breakfast, luncheon or a dessert, especially for the child or invalid, and should be added especially to our list of hot weather dishes, frequently replacing meat and potatoes and heavy, unseasonable desserts.

A Man of Experience.
"You are quite sure, Uncle Bushrod," she queried, "that Judy has no idea there are only books in those two boxes you took this morning over to the courthouse in the cart?"
"Miss Ma'y," answered the old chap, with dignity, "I done had three wives, an' Judy's de las, I reckon. An' I jes' tell you dis, honey, I don' trus' no colored 'oman's tongue."—Mrs. Burton Harrison in Lippincott's.

Bodily Proportions.
The proportions of the human figure, says an anatomist, are six times the length of the right foot. The face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the end of the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature.
The hand, from the wrist to the end of the middle finger, is also one-tenth of the total height. From the crown to the nape of the neck is one-twelfth of the stature.

The Original Pair.
Upon one point the disputants are agreed: Man descended from a pair of ancestors. Who they were is not so apparent.—Chicago Tribune.

Happiness is sometimes like a pair of spectacles. While one looks for it it sits astride one's very nose.—New York Times.

If a man saved the ash of all the cigars he smoked, he would have consumed 1,000 before he had a pound of ash.
